Apparition of a Dead Child - Extraordinary Somnambuliam. The New York Presbyterian of late date relates this story.

We were returning from our spring m ing of Presbytery—one gentleman and two young ladies—in a "rookaway," and the road none of the best. Night, cold and damp, overtook us eight or tea, miles from home, overtook us eight of ten miles from bones, but only a short distance from Judge Blank's, who, after we had arrived at his house, narrated the following unique tale. Said the Judge, as follows: "Years ago we had in our house a sweet little child, about four our house a sweet little child, about four years of age, and the object, of course, of a very tender affection. But sickness laid its hand upon it. Remedies, promptly resorted to, all proved in vain. Day after day the rose faded from the cheek, and the fire in the eyes burned low; and at length death closed those eyes and scaled those lips forever; and we learned by trying experience how intense darkness follows the anseching of one of

we learned by trying experience how intense darkness follows the quenching of one of those little lights of life.

"The time rolling sadly on, brought us at length to the hour appointed for committing our treasure to the ordinary custody of the grave. The friends assembled, the customary services were held, the farewell taken, and the little form securely shut beneath the well-screwed coffin-lid, and in due form the grave received its trust. We looked on and saw the earth thrown in, the mound raised above, and the plates of sod neatly adjusted into a great sheltering roof, and then wended our way back to our desolate home. Evening came on and wore away. My wife had gone into a servant, and I, unfitted by the scene of the day for aught else, had just laid my head on my pillow in our room upon the first floor of the house, when I heard a shriek, and in a moment more, my wife came flying into the moment more, my wife came flying into the room, and springing upon the bed behind me

exclaimed:

"See there! our child! our child!"

"Raising my head, my blood froze within me, and the hair upon my head stood up, as I saw the little ting in grave-clot's, with open, but manifestly sightless eyes, and pale as when we gave it the last kiss, walking slowly toward us. Had I been alone—had not the extreme terror of my wife compelled me to play the man, I should have leaped from the window and hed without casting a look behind. look behind.

"But not daring to leave her in such terror, I arose, sat down in a chair, and took the I arose, sat down in a chair, and took the little creature between my knees—a cold sweat covered my body—and gazed with feelings unatterable upon the object before me. The eyes were open in a vacant stare. The flesh was colorless, cold and clammy; nor did the child appear to have the power of either speech or hearing, as it made no attempt to answer any of our questions. The horror of our minds was the more intense as we had watched our child through tense as we had watched our child through sickness and death, and had been but a few ours before eye-witnesses of its interment.

While gazing upon it, and asking in my ughts. 'What can this extraordinary rovidence mean? for what can it be sent the servant girl having crept to the door, afteratime, suggested, is looks like Mrs. — a child."
"Now our neighbor had a child about the same age of ours, and its constant compan-ion. But what could bring it to our home at ion. But what could bring it to c that hour and in such a plight? suggestion had operated as a sedative upon our excited feelings, and rendered us more capable of calm reflection. And, after a time, we discovered in truth that the grave- lathes were night-clothes, and the corpse a somnambulist. And it became manifest that the excitement attending the loss and burial of its playmate, working upon the child's mind in sleep was the cause to which we were in-debted for this untimely and startling visit.

"Wiping away the perspiration, and taking a few long breaths, I prepared to countermarch the little intruder back to its forsaken bed. Back we went, it keeping at my side, though still asleep. It had walked quite a distance across the wet grass. I found the door of its however its to the formal of the formal and the formal of the formal the door of its home sjar, just as the fugitive had left it, and its sleeping parents uncon-scious of its absence. The door creaked as I pushed it open, and awakened the child who looked wildly around a moment, and then looked wildly around a moment, and then popped into bed.

"Now, if it had not been for my wife, as I have said, I should, on the appearance of this apparition, have made a leap of uncommon sgillty from that window; and after a flight of uncommon velocity for a person of my age and dignity, I should have been ready to take my oath in any court, either in Christendem or heathendom, that I had seen a ghost."

An English Surgeon Opposed to Fashion-Strange Mode of Receiving Company. A Book about Doctors, recently published in England, tells the fellowing good story of a celebrated English doctor:

John Hanter had no sympathy with his John Hanter had no sympathy with his wife's poetical aspirations, still less with the society which those aspirations led her to cultivate. Grudging the time which the labors of practice prevented him from devoting to the pursuits of his museum and laboratory, he could not restrain his non-iritable temper when Mrs. Huster's frivolous amusements deprived him of the quiet requisite for study. Even the fee of a patient who called him from his dissecting instruments could not reconcile him to the interruption. "I must go," he would say, relactantly, to his friend Lyan, when the living summoned him from his investigations among the dead, his friend Lyan, when the living summoned him from his investigations among the dead, "and earn this d—d guinea, or I shall be sure to want it to-morrow." Imagine the wisth of such a man, finding, on his return from a long day's work, his house full of musical professors, connoisseurs, and fashionable idlers—in fact, all the confusion, and hubbub, and hest of a grand party, which his lady had forgotten to inform him was that evening to come off! Walking straight into the middle of the principal reception room, he faced round and surveyed his unwelcome guests, who were not a little surprised to see him—dusty, toilworn, and grim—so unlike what "the man of the house" ought to be on such an occasion. "I knew nothing," was his brief address to the knew nothing," was his brief address to the astounded crowd—"I knew nothing of this kick up, and I ought to have been informed of it beforehand; but, as I have now returned home to study, I hope the present company will retire." MONETARY AND COMMERCIAL

Flunnelai Matters. As the suspension of the St. Louis Banks had been expected for a week previous, the announcement of the fact yesterday by tele-graph had no influence in Third-street, and graph had no influence in Third-street, and in no wise affected Missouri Bank-notes, which, indeed, could be sold lower than on Tuesday. Financial affairs improved, and the feeling among the Bankers and the Merchants was better than for some days

Our Bankable funds are still much narrowed, and now consist of Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana and the New-England and New-York State Banks.

The financial feeling and the case of the Money market have much improved during the past week, and the confidence is partially restored. The chief trouble here is in the extreme quietness of business. Cincinnati is strong enough and healthful enough in her Commercial relations, but is of course influenced by other cities, and for the time

In all the leading cities, Monetary matters are still very much unsettled and decidedly close, though there is an improvement from k. Rates of Money are very high in Philadelphia and Baltimore, and none but short prime Paper, and very little of that, is done at all. As the Banks of the the two last cities are in a state of suspension, nearly all business is about at a stand In St. Louis, the Banks have suspended, and Money is very close, while Eastern Exchange is extremely scarce and irregular, ruling at 4@5 premium for Bankaole funds. Undoubtedly, many parties came in to day to realize on Stocks bought at the low rates of the early part of the week, but the downward impulse of the market came in a great degree from the political sciencest and the hammering of the Bears, tossed on the Southern agrication. Tuesday's Tribune observes in regard to last week's New York Bank-statement and Monetary facilities: Inst week's New York Bank-statement and Monetary facilities:

The Week's Statement of Bank Averages shows a general contraction in all the items, but the great change of Thursday and Friday last in the Loan line makes the Statement of but little value. We grint it, however, as usual, as a matter of record. The actual amount of the Loan line at the close of business on Saturday was $137,174,900, instead of $127,304,900, as shown in the Average Statement. These Sgures show an actual expansion furring the week of nearly $0,000,000, as the average statement.
